Josh Groban was born February 27, 1981 in Los Angeles. While Groban plays numerous instruments such as the piano, drums, and wash board accordion; he is internationally known for his classically influenced pop baritone voice. Groban graduated high school in 1999 and attended Carnegie Mellon University in Philadelphia, PA; however he left after one semester to pursue his music full time.

Groban got the entertainment industry's attention when asked by David E. Kelly to star in the 2001 Ally McBeal season finale performing "You're Still You". Groban received numerous calls about his appearance, which led to Groban reprising his role the following season to perform "Where You Are". These two performances got the attention of Warner Bros Records and Groban was offered an exclusive contract.

titled debut Josh Groban, was released in November 2001 and after six months it became a double platinum.

In 2002 he performed at the Nobel Peace Concert and in December at The Vatican Christmas concert in Rome. In 2003 he performed during World Children's Day.

Groban's sophomore album Closer was released in November 2003. The album earned him a Grammy nomination with the single "You Raise Me Up" for best male pop performance.

In 2006 Groban released his double platinum 3rd album Awake, which launched him on a world tour with 81 stops. His 2007 Christmas album Noel spent five consecutive weeks at number 1 on the Billboard charts allowing him to surpass a record that was previously held by Elvis Presley.

Groban went on to become a household name and performed with legends such as Barbra Streisand.
